Explanation of Differences between Actuals and Estimates.

RECEIPTS.—Land Revenue.—The apparent deficiency under this head is more than made up by the receipts in January and February, which, if added, make a total of Rs. 75,00,000 from April 1878, the total estimate for the year ending March 1879 is 80 lakhs.

DISBURSEMENTS.—Land Revenue.—"Commissioners of Divisions." The increase was caused by the disbursement of arrears of pay, and under "Deputy Commissioners" by adjustment of furlough allowance. Abkari.—Purchase of spirits under revised arrangements explains the increase.

Law and Justice.—Under "Jails," owing to a continuance of high prices, the charge appears more than estimate.

FINANCIAL DEPARTMENT.

PROMPT SUBMISSION OF ACCOUNTS AND CASH BALANCE REPORTS.

Circular No. 1423, dated 21*st April* 1879.

The following orders of the Government of India are published, by order of the Chief Commissioner, for the information and guidance of Deputy Commissioners and District Treasury Officers in Mysore.

H. HUDSON,
Dy. Accts. General in Mysore.

Govt. of India, Financial Dept., Resolution No. 1478, dated Fort William, the 27th March 1879.

The President in Council now receives from Accountants General, by telegraph, returns of the principal revenues and expenditure, and of the cash balances, as soon after the end of each month as the figures can be ascertained.

2. The promptest possible receipt of these figures for all India is necessary that the Government may be acquainted with the contemporary condition of the finances.

3. An Accountant General cannot contribute the figures for all the treasuries in account with him until he receives them from the District Officers.

4. But District Officers seem not always to remember how much depends upon absolute punctuality on their part; consequently, defaults frequently occur, and the Government of India is needlessly deprived, by some trivial neglect in a few, perhaps, unimportant districts, of information which it is vital that it should possess.

The Local Governments are, therefore, requested to visit with severe displeasure any avoidable part of any District Officer in the despatch of his first and second lists of monthly payments with schedules and vouchers, together with the Cash Balance Report and the Cash Account with schedules and papers complete.

Each Accountant General will be directed to bring to the immediate notice of the Local Government any default in this matter by any of the District Officers in account with him.

Ordered, that this Resolution be communicated for information and guidance, to all Local Governments and Administrations, to the Comptroller General, and to all Accountants General and Deputy Accountants General in independent charge.

NUNDYDROOG DIVISION.

Notice is hereby given that a petition with schedule attached was filed in this Court by the said Abbas, on the 28th day of February 1879, praying for the benefit of the provisions of the said Chapter XX of the Code of Civil Procedure, and to be declared insolvent under section 351 of the said Code, and that the matter of the above petition and schedule will be heard on Friday the 13th day of June 1879, at Bangalore, at 11 A. M., at which time the said insolvent is required to appear in person before this Court, and then and there abide such order as the Court shall make on his behalf; and that all persons claiming to be creditors of the said Abbas are at liberty to appear and oppose the said application.

Resolution.—Approved.

The removal of aloe hedge along the line of Railway within Municipal Limits.

3. Read—Letter No. 1364, dated 24th March 1879, from the Agent and Manager, Madras Railway Company, in reply to the resolution of the Municipal Commissioners, with reference to their suggestion for the removal of aloe hedge along the line of Railway within Municipal limits.

Resolved.—That the attention of the Agent of the Madras Railway be called to section 63, Municipal Bye-laws, the provision of which Bye-law distinctly prohibits the growth of aloe hedge within Municipal limits.

Proceedings of the Chief Commissioner relating to the Budget Estimates of Receipts and Disbursements for the official year 1879—80.

4. Read—Proceedings of the Chief Commissioner of Mysore, No: 3838-39—Ml. 345, dated 17th March 1879, conveying certain observations on the Budget Estimates of receipts and disbursements of the Cantonment Municipal Commission for the official year 1879—80, together with President's explanation thereon.

Resolution.—The Commissioners consider that the Chief Commissioner when taking exception to the further employment of the present Octroi Manager would seem to have been under the impression that the Manager was not fully exerting himself in the interest of the Municipality, in the hope that falling off in the collection would induce the Government to sanction these duties being again farmed out as previously. It appears to the Commissioners that the falling off shewn to have occurrwith greater propriety be ascribed to the following causes, viz., the impoverished condition of the lower classes, a diminished population and increased prices of these articles all directly resulting from the late severe famine ; they would beg to point out that the present Manager is not a dealer in tobacco and has, consequently, no power to diminish or restrict the sales of this article ; he is personally well aware that the decision of the Supreme Government prohibiting the farming out of Octroi duties is final, and as, moreover, his salary is dependent on, and regulated by the amount monthly realized by the sales of tobacco, &c., it is evident that it is to his interest that these sales should be as large as possible. As the present Manager is, moreover, thoroughly conversant with the working of the establishment, and is believed to have carried out his duties heretofore in a conscientious, independent and upright manner, the Commissioners would respectfully urge that he should be continued on in his present post.

With reference to para 14 of the Proceedings above quoted, it is resolved that a Sub-Committee be appointed to report as to how far Mr. Leonard's proposal to merge the establishment of the Sar-Amin's Office with that of the Head Office can be carried into effect, the Committee's report to be submitted at the next meeting of the Commissioners ; the Committee to be composed as follows :—

President.

Slaughter House Contract, and the free grant of land to Moulvi Jafir Ali Saib.

5. Read—Docket No. 22—2, dated 3rd April 1879, from the Secretary to the Chief Commissioner of Mysore, requesting information with reference to the slaughter house contract, and a piece of ground granted to Moulvi Jafir Ali Saib free of cost.

Resolved.—That the President should in reply to Secretary's docket No. 22—2, dated 3rd April 1879, point out that the slaughter house contract is not in any way connected with an Octroi on animals brought into Municipal limits for consumption. No Octroi duty of this description is levied, and the present contract merely provides for the contractor paying a fee to the Municipality for animals slaughtered in the Municipal slaughter houses. The President should, at the same time, point out that the piece of vacant ground given to Moulvi Jafir Ali was granted under the provisions of section 119 of the Bangalore Municipal Regulations of 1871 ; the section here quoted gives authority to the President on such terms as he may think fit to allow any building to be set forward for improving the line of any public street in which such building is situated. As the applicant was in this instance a poor man and unable to purchase the small piece of ground in front of his house, the matter was brought before the Commissioners with a view to be dealt with by them.

Erection of Pandals for religious or other purposes.

6. Construction of pandal for public and religious purposes, the consideration of which was deferred at last meeting.

Resolved.—That the following addition be made to Bye-law No. 65.

"That no fee be charged for pandals erected on occasions of public religious festivals."

Proposed Railway Crossing to connect Kemp and Benson's Cross Roads.

7. Proposed by the President to connect Kemp and Benson's Cross roads by a level crossing over the Railway.

Resolved.—That application be made to the Agent, Madras Railway, with a view of ascertaining whether the Railway Company would have any objection to allowing a level crossing to be made across the line of Railway for the purpose of connecting Kemp and Benson's Cross road.

Resolution.—Approved.

II. Deferred propositions with reference to the alterations to be effected to Púrnaiya's Reservoir.

Resolution.—The Commissioners consider that the alterations proposed to be effected to Púrnaiya's Reservoir, will be from many points of view a very great improvement. This Reservoir in its present state is for a great portion of the year unserviceable even for a washing gunta, and from the foul and filthy condition of its water is a source of nuisance to the entire neighbourhood; the alteration now proposed will completely remedy these defects and meets therefore with the entire and unanimous approval of the Commissioners. It is resolved therefore that should the necessary sanction be obtained, that the work be put in hand at once, but as no provision has been made for this work in the Budget, it is proposed that sanction be asked to appropriate an amount sufficient for the purpose, from the sale proceeds of the Municipal Bandy-stand lately taken up by Government for the formation of the Railway.

III. Proceedings of the Chief Commissioner of Mysore, No. 4025—357, dated 26th March 1879, sanctioning the President's proposals to divide the Town of Bangalore into 5 instead of 3 Municipal Divisions.

Resolution.—To be recorded.

I.—Additional Proposition.

Read—Letter from Mr. A. S. Raghavachar, Municipal Commissioner, No. I Division, pointing out that the Executive Engineer's duties in the Pettah are of such a nature as to require constant supervision by a responsible officer of the Board, that under present arrangements the Municipal Executive Engineer is precluded from devoting his whole time and attention to the requirements of the Pettah and suggesting that application should be made to the Chief Commissioner to appoint Mr. Gibson salary of Rs. 100 monthly, exclusively to the Pettah as Municipal Engineer.

Resolution.—The Commissioners entirely concur in the views expressed in the proposition now brought forward by Mr. Raghavachar, and they are satisfied from the experience of the past that the arrangements of having a single Engineer for both Cantonment and Pettah cannot secure, on the part of that officer, that constant attention to the wants and requirements of the latter that is so essentially necessary. They resolve therefore that application be made to the Chief Commissioner to appoint Mr. Gibson as Municipal Engineer of the Pettah on a salary of Rs. 100 monthly; the additional charge that will be thus incurred, they further consider, can be without difficulty met, should the recommendations of the Sub-Committee held on the 9th of May 1878, for the purpose of taking into consideration the introduction of additional taxes, meet with the approval of the Chief Commissioner.

President, Town Muni. Commission.

Shimoga District.

The crops harvested were paddy, navané and javari, and sugar-cane milled in some parts of Chitaldroog. No seeds were sown during the month, the ryots are waiting for more rain to plough their lands, and the rain appears to be keeping back.

Lands paying an assessment of Rs. 1,420—12—0 were taken up for cultivation, while lands paying a kandayam of Rs. 31,154—10—0 were thrown up. The cause of this large amount of razinamas tendered is attributed to the ryots being unable to cultivate their excess lands for want of sufficient cattle, labor and funds.

Health.—The health of the population was bad, fever and ague being the principal diseases which [illegible]d during the month. The new mortuary returns for the month of April have not yet been [illegible] and consequently the number of deaths is omitted in this return.

Hitherto it has been the practice to affix postage stamps to parcels which the sender desires to prepay, but serious inconvenience has been found to arise from the stamps so affixed adhering imperfectly to the cloth, wax-cloth, tin, or other materials commonly used by the public for covering parcels. Fraud has also been found to result from the re-use of stamps which have become detached from the parcels to which they were affixed.

With effect from the 1st July 1879, prepayment of parcel postage may be made only in cash tendered with the parcel at the Post Office window within the prescribed hours.

Receipts will be given to the senders for all parcels tendered at the window during the prescribed hours, whether prepaid in cash or unpaid, the amount of prepayment, if any, being specified on the receipt.

This order applies to all parcels (inland, overland, insured, or value-payable), except those sent on the public service, which, if prepaid, must as heretofore be prepaid with service stamps.

DIRECTIONS HOW TO USE THE ENGLISH PLOUGH.

To keep the Plough in working order.

I. On receipt of the plough, notice carefully how the share (gula) is fixed on. It will be found tight and in a line with all the parts it touches.

II. If the share becomes at all loose when working, it should be tightened at once.

III. When the share has worn to two-thirds of its original size, it must be replaced by a new one. It is not intended to be mended, and ploughing will become too hard for the cattle if pieces of iron are patched on for the purpose.

IV. If the share becomes bent, it must be taken off the plough to be straightened.

V. The spare share sent with the plough should be kept as a pattern, and others made like it for use, by a blacksmith.

VI. A new share so made must be fitted to the plough, not the plough altered to fit the share.

VII. The wheel should have its axle greased frequently.

VIII. The unpainted parts of the plough should be greased over when the plough is not likely to be used for some time.

IX. The plough should be moved from field to field on its wheel, no other part touching the ground.

To set the Plough.

(a.) For dry land, or wet land when not puddled.

I. Raise the wheel and fix it the depth the plough is required to go, but do not fix it to plough deeper than the land is soft.

II. When ploughing, be careful the plough touches the bottom of the furrow in its whole length and that it is not the point only that is in the ground.

III. Use the wheel whenever it does not clog with mud, as it makes the plough lighter for the cattle to draw and easier for the ploughman to guide.

(b.) For wet land when reduced to puddle.

IV. Take off the wheel and its fixings and set the plough to go deep or light as required, by putting the peg that fixes the bridle in front, into a higher or lower hole as may be found suitable. The peg if placed in a lower hole will prevent the plough going too deep; if placed in a higher hole it will tend to sink the point.

To train men and cattle to work the Plough.

I. Under the most favorable conditions, the English plough should plough a furrow 8 inches deep by 10 inches wide, but until the ploughmen and the cattle have been using the plough for some months, this sized furrow should not be attempted.

II. On first trying the plough, the wheel should be raised above the surface of the ground and fixed so that the plough will not penetrate the ground more than three inches.

III. Only land that is soft, either from a recent fall of rain or from a previous ploughing, should be at first attempted.

IV. One man should hold the plough handles and guide the plough, while the second guides the cattle.

V. The cattle should be driven very slowly and not frightened.

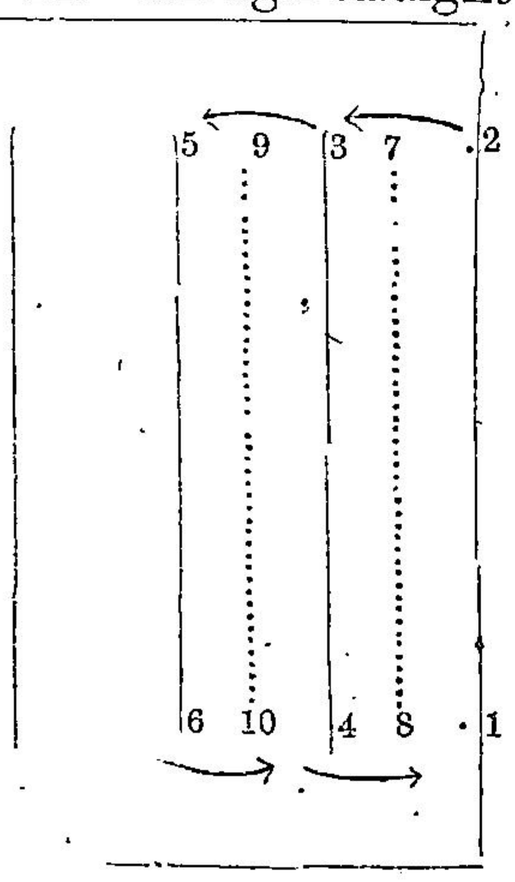
VI. As only one man is required to drive both plough and cattle when the ploughman understands the use of the plough, and the cattle are accustomed to pull it, the latter must be taught to be guided by means of two ropes, an end of one rope fastened to the nose rope of one bullock and the other to the nose rope of the second. The other ends of the ropes held with the plough-handles must be in the hands of the ploughman. One rope to each bullock is sufficient.

To plough a field with the English Plough.

I. First set the plough only deep enough to make a mark, say 1½ inches or 2 inches deep.

II. Plough straight lines from 1 to 2, 3 to 4 and 5 to 6 and so on until the whole field is marked out. The marks to be ploughed straight, equi-distant, and not less than 5 or over 10 yards apart.

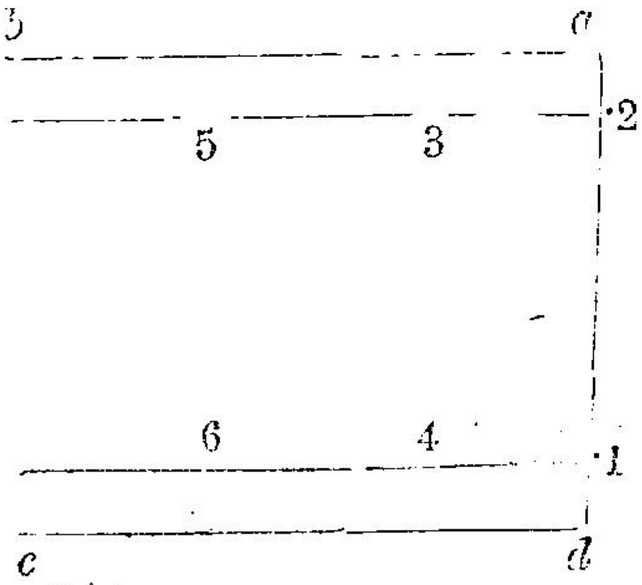


Next re-set the plough to plough as deep as it is intended to plough the whole field.

Now commence at 1 and plough to 2. Turn the plough on its left side when 2 is reached, and do not plough round. Re-commence ploughing at 3 and plough to 4. Turn the plough on its side again when 4 is reached, and return to 1. Then plough furrow after furrow up and down from 1 to 2 and from 3 to 4 until the whole is finished. When this first piece is ploughed, commence a second at 4 and plough to 3 and plough out the piece between 3 and 5 and 6 and 4 in the same way as the first piece; and so on all until the field is finished.

The reason for the first marking out a field and then finishing it piece by piece is that the first furrow is much harder to plough than the others, and it is easier to make the bullocks walk straight if the marking out is shallow than if deep.

III. When the whole of the pieces up and down the field are finished, there will remain the ends where the plough and bullocks were turned unploughed.



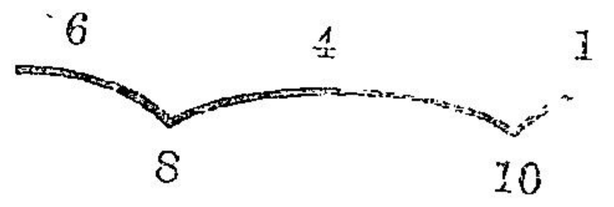
To plough these, begin first at one corner (a) and plough to (b.)

Then come down the field as far as is necessary which will be about 2 yards, and plough straight through 5 and 3 to 2. Turn to the left and continue until the head land is finished.

Plough the other end of the field in the same way.

To keep a field level.

I. When the field has been ploughed as described, it is evident open furrows will remain where each piece was finished, viz., between 7 and 8, and between 9 and 10. If at any future time the field is ploughed in the same direction, these furrows will become deeper, until at length the land assumes this shape:



II. To avoid this. The second time a field is ploughed in the same direction, the ploughman should begin at 8, plough to 7, and turn sharp round to the right (instead of as usual to the left) and plough back to 8, so as to gather the earth into the low furrow, and keep on turning to the right until the piece is finished with open furrows from 4 to 3 and 2 to 1.

The land will then assume the same level it had before it was touched.

To sub-soil Plough.

I. This means to disturb the land below where the plough usually penetrates.

II. To sub-soil plough. Plough a deep furrow with the English plough and along this plough with a native plough as deeply as possible, which will stir soil to a foot deep without bringing it to the surface.

Do this furrow by furrow, the native plough closely following the English, until the field is finished.

III. If this be tried, it will be found of great advantage in deep clay lands or red soils, and will much increase the crop, especially in a dry season.

Observations.

In his despatch dated the 7th February 1878, the Secretary of State noticed an experiment at the Nagpur Model Farm in 1876-77, where, in consequence of irrigation and manuring, Jelalia wheat produced 1,600 lbs., and white-eared wheat 2,200 lbs. acre, the average yield per acre in the country being only about 400 lbs. The the produce at Nagpur was estimated at Rs. 60, while the cost of cultivation, ir expenses, was given at Rs. 10 per acre. His Lordship desired to be informe are taken in the above and other provinces to impart to the agricultural community generally the lessons to be learnt from the operations of the model and experimental farms;" and observed, "as in many cases these farms appear to involve financial loss, it is the more important that their results, when satisfactory, should be utilized to the utmost for the general good of the country."

2. A copy of this despatch was circulated on the 21st March 1878 to the Governments of Madras, Bombay, and the North-Western Provinces and Oudh, and to the Chief Commissioners of the Central Provinces, British Burma, and Mysore, with a request for a report in connection with the farms maintained under their orders.

3. In Mysore, the Chief Commissioner states that no general steps have hitherto been taken in the direction indicated, the condition of the province during the past two or three years having forbidden any such measures. Mr. Harman, the Superintendent of the Bangalore Farm, has recently been authorized to make tours in the province twice in the year, once in the summer when the ragi crops are being sown, and again during the winter months when the crops are being reaped, in view to his acquiring practical experience in the native systems of agriculture and imparting to the ryots by personal communication and by experiments the benefits of deep ploughing, as also the advantages to be gained by the use of improved seed. The Chief Commissioner has also under consideration a scheme for placing one or two plots of land in each district under the charge of a village patel or other suitable person, who would cultivate the land in accordance with instructions from Mr. Harman. "By this means," the Chief Commissioner observes, "it is hoped that the ryots will have an opportunity, which the location of the Government Farm at Bangalore does not afford them, of judging of the results to be obtained by a better system of farming." Since these remarks were written, however, it has been decided to abolish the Bangalore Farm and to transfer the services of Mr. Harman to the Bombay Presidency.

4. In Burma, the only Government Farm is one established at Myouktoung in the Arakan Hill Tracts for the purpose of growing and curing tobacco. As regards the cultivation of tobacco on the low lands lying along the banks of rivers, the natives have but little to learn: the farm was started with a view of testing the capabilities of soil in up-land tracts, and more especially for the purpose of teaching the people an improved method of curing the leaf; but there has not been time to judge of the results as yet.

5. Mr. Buck, Director of Agriculture and Commerce, North-Western Provinces and Oudh, in reporting on the subject, refers to that portion of the minute recorded by Sir John Strachey in November 1874, proposing the formation of a Department of Agriculture in the North-Western Provinces, in which it was suggested that a good means of reaching the agricultural community would be by experiments in the estates under the Court of Wards. This suggestion, it is said, has been carried into effect, though not to so great an extent as was desired, in consequence of the drought of 1877. To some estates, however, improved English ploughs, improved sugar-mills, and selected seeds were sent; and in some districts, where the local officers took an interest in agricultural matters, seed and implements were distributed to estates other than those administered by the Court of Wards. As a further means of introducing improvements to the notice of the agriculturists, Mr. Buck lays great stress on the advantages of agricultural fairs; and he proposes to give greater encouragement to such fairs in future years. No attempts seem to be made by the Local Government to bring directly to the notice of the natives the results of the experiments conducted on the State Farms.

There are two Government Farms in the Bombay Presidency, one at Bhadgaon sh and the other at Salaru in Sind. At Salaru nothing has as yet been done in irection; but the Superintendent proposed making a tour in the cold weather which he would acquire and diffuse useful information. He is to report the results of his first tour, in order that the Government of Bombay may be in a position to judge of the desirability of repeating the experiment.

At Bhadgaon, too, little appears to have been attempted. The Superintendent reports that instruction is imparted through farm apprentices, farm servants, and visitors. The system of apprentices, if carefully worked, would no doubt prove useful; but nothing can be expected from farm servants as a means of imparting agricultural information to the native community. Mr. Stormont, the Superintendent, recently visited Madras and Bangalore, under authority from the Government of Bombay, with a view to ascertain the system followed on the farms at those places; and he was instructed to report the result of his enquiries on his return to Khandesh.

The Local Government has also, after consultation with Mr. Robertson of the Sydapet Farm, decided on commencing a system of agricultural education in the Deccan, and probably, in due course, the Bhadgaon Farm will be made subsidiary to the scheme of instruction.

7. In the Central Provinces, Major Macdougall, the Superintendent of the Nagpur Farm, proposes to publish the results of "any decidedly successful experiment" in the Rural Gazette, a paper printed in Hindi, Mahrathi, and Urdu by the Educational Department, of which a copy is sent to every Government School in the Central Provinces. The Chief Commissioner approves of this proposal; but such a means of making known the operations of the farm seems scarcely to be what is required, the record of these experiments being useful to the agricultural community only when they can be followed and explained on the farm on which they have been tried.

8. In the Madras Presidency, good and useful work is being done under the supervision and guidance of Mr. Robertson, the Superintendent of Government Farms. Attached to the Sydapet Farm, on which experiments of various kinds are tried, is an Agricultural College, in which a complete course of agricultural instruction is afforded, and which is intended eventually to accommodate upwards of one hundred students. In view to a further diffusion of information, Mr. Robertson has proposed the establishment of small agricultural experimental stations all over the Presidency, each being placed in charge of a trained agriculturist, who is also to conduct an elementary agricultural class. This scheme is, however, at present in abeyance for want of funds.

Recently, a very interesting ploughing competition was held at the Sydapet Farm, in which European, American and native ploughs were used, the competitors as well as the visitors from different parts of the country being very numerous. Such open competitions as these afford an efficient means of interesting neighbouring cultivators in the methods and processes of the improved system of agriculture practised on the farm. The public reports shew that the exhibition was watched with very great interest and was completely successful.

9. From the facts summarised above, it may be said generally that only in the North-Western Provinces and Madras is any real effort being made to teach agricultural reform to the people. In the North-Western Provinces, a Department of Agriculture and Commerce has been created, with a Director at its head, whose special duty it is to organize the collection of agricultural and commercial statistics; to direct experiments for agricultural improvement in model farms and elsewhere; to watch and report on the progress of trade, and to suggest in what directions it may be developed, or hindrances to its prosperity removed; and to investigate facts connected with the condition of the agricultural classes. The scope and objects of the Department are clearly explained in minute recorded by Sir John Strachey in November 1874, to which the attention Local Governments and Administrations was drawn in the letter from this D dated the 11th August 1875, Nos. 11—426-433, regarding the collection of statistics.

In Madras there is a Department, which, though not as yet formally recognized as a Department of Agriculture, is practically one, with an efficient and well qualified Director at its head; but its expansion has hitherto been greatly impeded by various causes, not the least among which has been the want of funds.

10. In other provinces very little is being done, nor as matters stand can much be expected. Experimental farms indeed, when they stand alone, are of comparatively small utility. To be really useful they should be part of a system of agricultural instruction; they should be attached to a school where sound agricultural instruction is conveyed in class, and they should be the field for carrying into practice in the presence of students the theories of which the reasons have been explained to them in the class-room. If the students are taken from the classes dependent on the land for their living, satisfactory progress in the diffusion of agricultural instruction under such a system will soon be apparent. It is with much satisfaction that the Government of India has watched the recognition of these principles in Madras and the efforts that are being made there gradually to mature a complete system for their application in practice. The scheme for action in the same direction which has just been proposed by His Excellency the Governor of Bombay is also gratifying as indicating the interest taken in the matter by the Government of that Presidency. In other provinces much cannot be expected under the present system, though, defective as it is, the farms, if they are carefully and intelligently managed, intelligently supervised, and placed on a substantial and permanent basis, must gradually do good, and the Government of India desire again to commend the subject very earnestly to the attention of Local Governments and Administrations. Bengal especially is a province which is singularly deficient in opportunities for agricultural instruction, while it is perhaps of all Indian provinces the one where a reform of practice is most needed. It is also the province of whose agricultural resources and capacities the governing body knows least. It is a matter of more than ordinary importance that the cultivating and wealthy land-owning community in this great province should be taught to realize the advantages of a better agricultural practice, and that steps should be taken to remove the reproach which now exists that the very elements of agricultural information, such as the average yield of particular crops in particular soils, are wholly absent. Efforts in this direction were made some years ago by Sir George Campbell; but these efforts, though well intentioned, were frustrated by radical errors in the selection of sites for farms, as well as in the selection of Superintendents. The results were so unsatisfactory that the farms were broken up one after the other, the last being abolished in 1877, on the ground that all the attempts which had been made to teach agriculture to the people of the country had ended in failure. This conclusion was not accepted by the Government of India, and it is desirable in connection with the present question that the views then expressed to the Government of Bengal should be brought prominently before other Local Governments and Administrations. In the letter from the Government of India to the Government of Bengal dated the 4th May 1877, No. 91, it was said:—

"His Excellency in Council is by no means prepared to admit that, because it is not necessary at present to teach to the natives on a scientific basis all the technicalities of the highest farming, there is therefore no opening for instruction of a highly useful, if of a more modest kind, adapted to the present educational and agricultural standard of the country. His Excellency in Council is unable to agree with His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor in the opinion that the attempts of the Government to teach agriculture to the people have failed everywhere. Where these attempts have failed, as at Poosah, failure has been the result of inefficient management; but where ordinary care and attention have been intelligently given to the subject, it is unquestionable that, as at Sydapet in the Madras Presidency for [illegible]tance, good results have ensued.

[illegible]. It is not necessary to employ specially qualified agricultural chemists for the purposes contem- Government in the establishment of model or experimental farms. The objects of the [illegible]ave been frequently stated, but they have been well and briefly summarised by Sir John [illegible]ollowing extract from his Minute of the 28th November 1874, proposing the creation Agriculture and Commerce in the North-Western Provinces:—

"'The object of these model farms should be three-fold: first, to obtain complete information, based on actual facts, as to the average productiveness of different crops on the different classes of soil on which they are ordinarily cultivated, and the cost of cultivation; secondly, to establish and prove to the native agriculturists the advantages to be gained from small improvements, such as they are able themselves to carry out under existing conditions, such as deeper ploughing, economical use of canal water, selection of seed, &c.; thirdly, to make experiments as to staples and industries which it may be possible to introduce if new, or to familiarize and improve if already existing in the country. The extension of sericulture, the improvement of indigenous fibres, and the manufacture of a finer class of tobacco, may be mentioned among the objects of such experiments.'"

"It is to these objects that attention should be particularly directed. It is evident that lessons in such matters, especially under the second head, and instructions in such details (important though they are) as the proper storage and application of the manures ordinarily employed in the country, shewing experimentally how they may be made to retain all their fertilizing elements, of which much is now wasted, the proper treatment and breeding of live stock, the improvement of the implements employed, and other similar matters, may as successfully be imparted by an energetic man of fair intelligence, possessing an adequate practical knowledge of modern farming (and consequently having such knowledge of agricultural chemistry as is essential to the successful pursuit of modern farming), as by a professional chemist of high scientific attainments.

"The Governor General in Council is convinced that lessons of this kind are urgently needed, and that if measures for the elementary instruction in such matters of the agricultural community are persevered in by the Local Governments (without whose cordial co-operation nothing can be done), they cannot fail after a reasonable time to have very considerable effect upon the cultivators in the neighbourhood for the Government farm and through them upon others further away."

11. The excellent results which have followed the creation of a Department of Agriculture and Commerce, in the North-Western Provinces, in the impulse which has been given by it to agricultural enquiry and improvements, indicate perhaps the best form in which Government action can be directed to the promotion of the objects in view. With the establishment of such a Department in each province (and it is maintained in the North-Western Provinces entirely from provincial funds) the extension of the system, whether by agricultural instruction in schools, or by practical teaching in experimental farms, or where means are available by a combination of both, could be regulated under efficient control and advice according to the particular requirements or circumstances of each province. From this point of view the Governor General in Council will be glad to learn that the matter has again received from the Government of Bengal and other Local Governments and Administrations the consideration which its importance merits, and he would wish to be informed at an early date of the results of that consideration.

ORDER.—Ordered, that the above Resolution be communicated for information and guidance to the Local Governments and Administrations noted in the margin, and for information to the Secretary of State for India.

RESOLUTION.

The Paris International Exhibition of 1878 having been brought to a close, and the prizes awarded, the Governor General in Council desires to place on record briefly the results of the arrangements adopted for the collection and transmission of the articles exhibited by this country, and to acknowledge the services rendered by the officers entrusted with the duty of carrying out those arrangements.

2. Early in 1877, when the French Government invited the co-operation of the India Office in the representation of India at the proposed Exhibition, Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India remarked that it was undesirable for India to be represented at exhibitions like that to be held at Paris to the same extent and at so great a cost as on previous occasions. The Government of India concurred in the view expressed by the Marquis of Salisbury with the more readiness that His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales had agreed to lend his collection, which would sufficiently represent the higher class of Indian art manufacture, and because a collection of the raw products of India, similar to that supplied to the late Philadelphia Exhibition, was to be contributed by the India Museum in London. Under these circumstances, it was considered unnecessary to take any action in the direction of representing India at the Exhibition beyond communicating, as desired by the Secretary of State, with His Highness the Maharaja of Kashmir and other native chiefs, leaving it to them to contribute to the Exhibition if, of their own accord, they should desire to do so.

3. It was soon ascertained, however, that the surplus stores in the India Museum were inadequate to supply a suitable collection of products for the Exhibition, and that many important groups could not be exhibited unless fresh specimens were supplied. Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India, therefore, in his letter of the 26th April, asked for contributions from India, leaving it to the Government of India to determine what articles should be sent to supplement those already available at the India Museum, and observing only that if, without any meterial increase of cost, a larger quantity of articles than was actually needed for the Exhibition could be procured for meeting similar requirements of museums and institutions in England, it would be desirable to take the opportunity of replenishing the stores of the India Museum.

4. The Government of India asked for a specification of the articles required to supplement the collection at the India Museum; but as there was little time to spare, if a useful collection was to be made, a reply to this reference was not awaited, and steps were at once taken for the preparation in India of a list of products to be collected and for the prompt collection of good samples of them. The plan of operations was simple: the Government of India placed the whole matter in the hands of two selected officers—Brandis, the Inspector General of Forests, and Mr. J. E. O'Conor, Assistant Secretary [illegible]s Department. To the former was assigned the duty of arranging for the collection of woods and other forest products, of which there were few or none in the India Museum; and to the latter was entrusted the duty of arranging for a similar collection of the raw products of the country. Both were empowered to correspond direct with Local Governments and Administrations, and on their suggestion each Government nominated a special officer to carry on the local work, these corresponding direct with Dr. Brandis and Mr. O'Conor, respectively. The results of this arrangement, both in point of economy and as regards absolute excellence of the specimens collected, are, in the opinion of the Governor General in Council, sufficient evidence of the efficiency of the system adopted. It seems clear from the experience acquired on this occasion that, whether it is desired to make only collections of primary material, or to make also collections representative of the art-manufactures of India, the appointment of one officer specially qualified by taste and knowledge for the conduct of such work will ensure much more satisfactory and expeditious results than the elaborate machinery hitherto resorted to of local and central committees and sub-committees, and that the work will be more cheaply done.

5. The collections which were made by the local officers with the help of the classified lists prepared by the two officers selected by the Government of India were sent to Calcutta in small lots from time to time, and there the specimens were sorted, prepared, classified, labelled, catalogued, packed, and despatched,—those of forest produce under the supervision of Dr. Brandis and Mr. J. S. Gamble, his Personal Assistant, now Officiating Conservator of Forests, Bengal; and those of raw produce by Mr. O'Conor. The contributions of raw produce from the Madras and Bombay Presidencies were, however, an exception to the rule: these were sent direct from Madras and Bombay, in order to save time and prevent delay which would have precluded their exhibition at Paris. The work of collection, classification, and transmission of the articles received was conducted under difficult conditions, arising mainly out of the shortness of the period during which it had to be accomplished, but the final results were quite satisfactory, the collection sent being fairly, and for many groups of raw products almost exhaustively, representative of the productions of British India and Burma. The number of wood specimens exhibited was 650, this number including 370 different species. This collection has now been presented to the French National Forest School at Nancy, where for ten years past a large proportion of the forest officers in India have received their professional education under the care of the Director and Professors of that excellent institution.

6. The awards numbered fifty-six altogether, comprising two grands prix (diplômes d'honneur), 10 gold medals, 15 silver medals, 20 bronze medals, and 9 honourable mentions distributed as shewn in the annexure to the letter from the Prince of Wales.

7. Mr. O'Conor was one of those whose exertions mainly contributed to the success of the Exhibition so far as the raw products of the country are concerned, and the Governor General in Council is pleased to transfer one of the gold medals awarded to himself personally by the International Jury, and to present it to that gentleman as the officer of the Government of India whose services specially merit recognition. The gold medal for carpets was probably awarded on account of a contribution made by the Jubbulpore School of Industry, and if this is the case it will be sent through the Chief Commissioner of the Central Provinces to Colonel Ward, the Superintendent, for deposit in the school. The diplomas and rest of the medals conferred on Government, excepting those awarded personally, which will be forwarded to the persons to whom they were awarded, should be deposited in the Indian Museum at Calcutta.

8. The collections made by Mr. Buck with the help of Mr. Duthie, Superintendent of the Botanical Gardens, Saharanpur, and that by Mr. Colin Browning, Inspector of Education in the Central Provinces, reflect much credit on those officers, and His Excellency in Council desires that the thanks of the Government of India may be conveyed to them.

9. The Forest Department has already received its full meed of recognition. To Dr. Brandis, as representing the collective labors of the forest officers under the Government of India, the Jury awarded one gold medal, and to Colonel Beddome, similarly representing Madras, another. From the Bombay Presidency most contributions arrived too late for the Exhibition, but were utilized in the preparation of additional sets of wood specimens which were distributed among the offices of Conservators of Forests and other public institutions in Europe and America in accordance with the desire of the Secretary of State. The Governor General in Council has no doubt that the Governments of Madras and Bombay will fully acknowledge the credit due to such of their officers as were employed in getting up the collection. It remains for His Excellency in Council to express his acknowledgments to the forest officers employed in the provinces under the Government of India. From the Punjab, Mr. Baden-Powell, the Conservator, and the officers under his orders, sent a large, varied, carefully-named, and selected collection, which included among others a number of interesting specimens from the inner arid Himalaya, got together by the Reverend Mr. Heyde of the Moravian Mission, Lahoul. The collections from Bengal, prepared under the orders of the Conservator, Dr. Schlich, arrived mostly in good time, and furnished a large number of interesting specimens from parts of the country, the forest resources of which are not generally known. Mr. Greig, the Conservator of Forests in the North-Western Provinces, furnished specimens from the forests in Dehra Dún, Jaunsar, and Kumaun, but larger collections which had been made were not sent down to Calcutta, as the logs were unseasoned. From Oudh, a few well seasoned pieces were received, but the remainder did not arrive till after the specimens for the Exhibition had left Calcutta. The contributions of Mr. Gustav Mann from Assam, of Captain Doveton from the Central Provinces, of Mr. Drysdale from Berar, and of Major Seaton and Mr. Ribbentrop from Burma, included some fine and well-seasoned pieces of useful kinds of trees and specimens of minor forest produce. Good specimens of sandalwood from Mysore were received from Captain van-Someren, the Conservator, but specimens of other timbers could not be forwarded in time for the Exhibition on account of the difficulty experienced in getting carriage owing to the famine. The important collection of Major-General Barwell, the Chief Commissioner of the Andamans, served to shew the numerous handsome and useful timbers which are procurable in those islands. The logs and pieces thus contributed by the various provinces were received in the rough at the workshop which had been established in Calcutta, and there, under the supervision of Messrs. Gamble and Smythies, they were prepared and finished into specimens. To these gentlemen likewise the thanks of Government are due for the great skill and indefatigable energy with which they have accomplished their portion of the work under singularly difficult circumstances.

10. The collections of specimens representing arts manufacture sent from India were made in a semi-official way by various local authorities in direct communication with Lord Northbrook, the Chairman of the Indian Section of the British Commission. The Governor General in Council is gratified to find from the 5th paragraph of the letter from His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales that their exertions have been appreciated. He also desires here to record his acknowledgments of the services rendered in connection with the Indian collections by Sir Cunliffe Owen, Colonel Pearson, and Messrs. Purdon Clarke, Birdwood, and Waterfield, whose exertions have already secured the approbation of His Royal Highness.

A. O. HUME,

Secretary to the Government of India.

No. 204, dated India Office, London, 5th December 1878.

From—Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India.

To—The Government of India.

I forward herewith, for your Excellency's information and for such measures as you may think fit to take, a copy of a letter* from His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, dated the 31st October, and of the reply thereto† relative to the awards which have been made to India in connection with the Paris Exhibition.

* And enclosure.

† Dated 30th November 1878.

Dated Marlborough House, Pall Mall, London, 31st October 1878.

From—His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales.

To—Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India.

The International Jury of the Paris Universal Exhibition having completed their labors, I have the satisfaction to submit, for the information of the Secretary of State for India in Council, the accompanying list of awards made to India.

2. The following are the principal, viz.,—

Two diplomas of honor (Grand Prix), both awarded to Lord Lytton: one on account of the great progress made in India in the cultivation of tea; the other in acknowledgment of the personal interest taken by His Excellency in the production of raw silk for the European market, and especially for the improvement in the culture and preparation of the tasar and other wild silks of India.

Ten gold medals: two to Lord Lytton for wheat and other cereals and vegetable products; one to the Government of India for carpets; one to Mr. H. Lock, of the Calcutta Museum, for a collection of native teas; one each to Dr. Brandis and Colonel Beddome for the collections of forest produce; one to Dr. Bidie for a collection of ary products; one to His Highness the Maharajah of Kashmir; one to Hajee Mooktar Shah, Master Craftsman to His Highness the Maharajah of Kashmir; and one to the Murree Brewery Company for beers,—in all forty-five awards, two "Grand Prix," nine gold, fifteen silver, twenty bronze medals, and nine honorable mentions.

3. Thus, in the International competition of the present year,—the most severely contested of all that have preceded it,—the Indian Empire has taken two of the highest prizes for articles in which China has hitherto monopolised the markets of the world.

Eighteen awards (including the Grand Prix and gold medal) have been made for Indian teas, a distinction which it may be hoped will serve to stimulate the growing demand for them.

4. The remarkable interest taken in the Indian wild silks at the present Exhibition is principally due to the experiments made for the Government of India by Mr. Thomas Wardle, of Leek. He has now shewn that they can be spun as fine as Chinese silk and dyed of any color. It is, therefore, probable that they will become merchantable wherever silk is woven or worn.

To mark their sense of the far-reaching effects that are likely to result from these improvements, the International Jury have awarded a Grand Prix to Lord Lytton and a silver medal to Mr. A. O. Hume.

5. This is also the proper occasion for me to request Your Lordship to convey to the Viceroy and Governor General of India, and to the Governors of Madras and Bombay, and the respective Lieutenant-Governors of the Provinces my best thanks for the cordial assistance given by them, at my request, in the preparation of the various collections of art manufactures in India by the Royal Commission. Of the officers who acted under their orders, I would name Dr. Brandis and Lieutenant-Colonel Michael, C. S. I., as deserving of special notice for their services.

6. To Colonel Pearson, who acted under the orders of the Secretary of State in Council, the efficiency of the arrangements of forest products is mainly due. I have also been particularly indebted to Mr. George Birdwood, C. S. I., for the selection he recommended of manufactures to supplement the exhibition of my own collection of Indian presents, as well as for his admirable hand-book on the art manufactures of India. I have also to express the great obligations the Royal Commission has been under to Mr. Henry Waterfield, your Secretary in the Statistical and Commercial Department, as the channel of their communications with the India Office, and for his cordial co-operation at all times with Mr. P. Cunliffe-Owen, C. B.

7. The duties of Mr. P. Cunliffe-Owen and of Mr. C. Purdon Clarke in connection with the Indian Court have been of so exceptionable a nature, that, though they are officers of the Royal Commission, I feel it my duty to submit their names also to your Lordship. Mr. Clarke's design for the central pavilion secured the success of the Indian Exhibition. The excellent manner in which Mr. Cunliffe-Owen has disbursed the grant made by Your Lordship in Council for the purposes of the British Indian Section, and his general direction of it as Executive Secretary of the Royal Commission, will not fail to meet with your commendation. India has been represented at Paris this year with a completeness and splendour never before reached, and the effect produced throughout Europe has been quite unprecedented.

It is too well recognized to need my impressing it on your Lordship's attention how has been due to Mr. Cunliffe-Owen.

THE INDIAN EMPIRE.

No. 61 (Revenue), dated the 29th August 1878, and enclosures.

Read also two letters from M. Rondot, Delegate from the Chamber of Commerce of Lyons to the Paris Exhibition, and President of the Jury of Silk Industry, soliciting information connected with wild silks, including tasar, in India.

RESOLUTION.

In the Resolution of the 23rd November 1875, the Government of India stated the facts regarding the production of tasar silk so far as they were known to it, as well as the steps taken or under consideration in reference to the utilization of this article and the development of a regular industry. The general conclusion which seemed to be justified by the information before it was that the domestication of the tasar worm offered no prospect of remuneration even if the process were in itself possible; but that if certain difficulties arising from natural conditions connected with the collection of the worm in its wild or in a semi-domesticated state could be overcome, and that if the silk could be satisfactorily reeled and dyed,—for difficulties had been encountered in connection with both processes,—a regular and extensive export trade from India to Europe, either in the shape of cocoons or as raw silk, would spring up; for it seemed certain that European manufacturers would take the raw produce if laid down at reasonable prices.

2. The first step to be taken, however, was to procure further information. It was obviously premature to take any measures having in view the creation of a regular industry without first obtaining definite information on important points on which information was wanting either wholly or in part. Such points were: the exact cost at which the raw material could be collected or produced in commercial quantities, both in the wild and semi-domesticated state; the cost of reeling the silk; the weight of silk in proportion to cocoon; the degree in which the filaments would bear croissure; and the consequent ultimate value of the silk in the market. As a first step towards the obtainment of such data, the Government of Bombay and the Chief Commissioner of the Central Provinces were requested to collect a quantity of cocoons in order that careful experiments might be made with them in this country, as also under the direction of Her Majesty's Secretary of State in some of the leading filatures in France and Italy. This was done, and the results of the experiments undertaken by Mr. Wardle under the direction of the Secretary of State with the cocoons thus supplied are now before the Government of India and are stated in his reports attached to this Resolution. No experiments were made in this country, the gentlemen to whom cocoons were supplied for the purpose having pronounced them to be old and unfit for reeling, especially in this country, where the special machinery and appliances required for this purpose are not available. This is of little consequence, however, considering the success of the experiments in Europe, and having regard to the fact that in all probability filatures in India for tasar silk will not be required, and that only a trade in cocoons will prove remunerative.

3. At the same time that these cocoons were collected in the Central Provinces, the other Local Governments and Administrations were invited to make proposals and suggestions in the matter.

4. The result of the enquiries and experiments made in India has not on the whole advanced matters very far. In the Bombay Presidency the experiments undertaken by Major Coussmaker for the semi-domestication of the worm were interrupted by the drought and famine. They have since been renewed, but as yet with inconclusive results. These are stated in a letter from Major Coussmaker, from which the following paragraphs are extracted :—

"2. My former experiments, as well as those conducted by Mr. Woodrow, had proved that it was a mistake to attempt to rear these worms on twigs, either those cut from road-side trees, or from those which had received some care and attention in a garden, and that the plan most likely to succeed was to feed them on shrubs in localities where they could be protected from their enemies, and, if need be, from unfavorable weather. With this view, I began to collect young plants.

"3. I had noticed in 1876 that the tasar worm throve well on Lagerstræmia indica, an ornamental shrub, fairly abundant in the cantonment of Poona; this is a plant which throws up a good many suckers during the monsoon, and I soon got a few plants together. I took a house which was well supplied with shade and water, and my gardener managed to collect 172 plants between December and July, many of them only a few inches high, but some were large enough to be of use. There were also in the ground six bushes, and my first care, when I came in from the districts, was to cut them all back to the hard wood, and apply to their roots a fair amount of manure. The consequence was that as soon as the rain commenced the plants shot most freely into leaf.

"4. Mr. Woodrow had not been able to save any seed cocoons, but I had found three female cocoons in the districts, and the Marathi woman, who had been my chief assistant in looking after these worms before, had collected twelve. I soon had several moths from these cocoons, and found, as I had noticed before, that there was no difficulty in getting an abundant supply of fertile eggs. Hardly any females were wasted; it was only necessary to put them out over-night on any bush, and it was almost a certainty to find them paired at daybreak. I found that it was not necessary to tether them; they rarely moved from the twig on which I placed them. As fast as the young worms hatched out, I put the trays containing them among the leaves of the plants and in a few hours they commenced feeding. The weather was everything I could desire, showery with a few breaks of fine weather; the bushes were full of young shoots, and the worms throve as I have never seen them thrive before. I tied bamboo screens together and covered over the plants as they stood in the open. The worms changed their skins at intervals of 4 to 5 days instead of 5 to 8, as had been the case when I reared them indoors on gathered food, and they spun their cocoons in 28 to 35 days instead of 40 to 50, as I had noted before. The moths came out of these cocoons in 27 to 30 days, and their eggs proved fertile, producing caterpillars which grew as fast and as large as the first. The only difference that I observed was that the 'cement' of the cocoons of the later crops was less uniformly white; this may have been due to the changes in the weather or the quality of the leaf, some shrubs having been eaten off three and four times this monsoon.

"5. The Lagerstræmia bush proved an excellent food; it flushed so quickly that a plant 2 feet high, after being fed off quite bare, cut back, and re-potted, was again in thick leaf in a fortnight, and the same batch of worms stripped it again. In changing the plants, and in daily examining the cages, a few accidents occurred; but 100 worms yielded 71 cocoons.

"6. I enclósed an old Carissa carandas, which had neither been pruned nor manured, with bamboo screens, and liberated 50 worms there. In the course of a month I gathered 31 cocoons, a little larger than those of the Lagerstræmia, but much harder and yellower. The caterpillars seemed to thrive a little better on this bush, and completely stripped it, but the tree did not recover quickly, and did not yield another supply of food the whole monsoon.

"7. I put six worms on to a young Zizyphus jujuba tree in my garden, but neither enclosed it, pruned it, nor manured it. It had a great deal of leaf and flower on it, and the worms ate both. They grew very large and healthy, being in every stage of their existence a little ahead of some of the same batch feeding on Lagerstræmia. Five cocoons were spun here, larger than any that I had gathered from off the other trees.

"8. I let the majority of the moths fly away, for as soon as the male has left her, the female is quite ready to go and look for suitable trees to deposit her eggs on. I had not enough food for more than 100 worms at a time in my own compound, and almost every attempt which I made at bringing them up elsewhere, unsheltered by the screens, failed. Crows, squirrels, and other enemies carried them off, and I hardly got a single cocoon; but in my own compound I continued to rear a few at a time, changing them from one tree to another as I found it expedient. The result of the experiments which I made shewed me plainly that plants in the ground with or without screens over them, gave the most suitable food; that it mattered not whether the young shoots were eaten down by the caterpillars or cut off by the pruning shears. The Lagerstræmia never sprouted again, and it was only the very limited supply of food which I had that prevented me rearing many more worms.

"9. From the single experiment I have mentioned, Carissa does not seem to recover quickly. Zizyphus seems to grow very fast, principally at the extremities of its long straggling branches; but as I only had one tree in my compound, I could not be sure about its usual habit of growth.

"10. I baked some of the cocoons gathered from each of these three trees and sent them home to Mr. Wardle, asking him to give me an opinion on the qualities of the respective fibres. I had all the burst and injured cocoons cleaned, and sent them, together with those which Mr. Woodrow had on hand, to the Alliance Mills in Bombay to be converted into yarn. I have kept some fifty seed cocoons for next year's experiments.

"11. I have got together a good many plants for next season's experiments—353 Lagerstræmia indica, 10 Lagerstræmia parviflora, 13 Conocarpus latifolia; plants and cuttings all rooted and in leaf: also 136 Carissa carandas, 135 Zizyphus jujuba, 105 Pentaptera tomentosa, seedlings. There are besides 3 Zizyphus bushes in the compound, and if my gardener will but take care of these during my eight months' absence from Poona, I hope to resume my experiments under better auspices.

"12. The past season has been very favorable for tasar worms. Mr. Lyle, who was cultivating them to a small extent at Dapuri in 1876, tells me that some of the men who were under him then came to him lately and asked him whether he wanted any more cocoons as they had seen several. He happened to be on the spot and sent a man to see how many he could collect within three hours. He came back with 300, and said that he had heard that some people had been taking them into Poona for sale, presumably to the native physicians. I myself have already found many more casually this year in the districts than I usually do."

5. In Madras, in the North-Western Provinces and Oudh, in Burma, and in the Hyderabad Assigned Districts, as also in Mysore, there would seem at present to be no prospect of establishing any traffic in the cocoons or raw silk of the undomesticated worm.

6. The late Chief Commissioner of Assam thought that any attempt to foster the [illegible]de in Sylhet would prove unsuccessful, and refrained from offering any suggestions beyond drawing attention to the existing and old-established silk industries of Assam, which in his opinion might have opened up a wide field for private enterprise were it not for the extraordinary delays that exist in communications between the province and the rest of India. Government have under consideration the question of improving the facilities for communicating with Upper Assam. It is hoped that when the contemplated improvement is effected, Colonel Keatinge's expectations will to some extent be realized; for there is at least as great a demand in the European markets for the cocoon of the eria and moonga worm as there is for that of the tasar.

7. In Bengal the tasar worm appears to abound in various localities generally, in all the tree and scrub jungle lying south and west of a line marking the southern and western limit of the continuous cultivation of the Gangetic alluvial and of the Orissa littoral. Whether the insect is of one or of several species, is a matter of doubt, and the season and mode of breeding and collecting appear to vary with the locality where it is found. The price of cocoons, it is alleged, ranges from Rs. 6 to Rs. 10 per kahan (1 kahan=16 pans of 80 cocoons each, i. e., 1,280 cocoons); and in regard to its yield, one kahan makes in Bankurah two pairs of dhotis, in Sooree 15 chittacks of silk, and in the Southal Pergunnahs from 1½ to 2 seers. These and other more detailed particulars, furnished by the Government of Bengal, though admittedly incomplete and unauthenticated in some respects, are useful as far as they go, and the Government of India will be glad to be informed of the measures which are being taken to gather further particulars as well as of their results. The Lieutenant-Governor's opinion on the proposal made by Mr. J. Deveria, to the effect that the State should undertake the rearing of tasar cocoons in the jungle mahals of Chota Nagpore for sale to reelers and exporters is also awaited.

8. From the Punjab, some samples of tasar silk, reeled from cocoons produced in the Hoshiarpur district by the Deputy Commissioner, were reported on by the authorities whom the Government of India consulted as fairly successful. Some specimens of cloth, which were also received from Hoshiarpur, were found to have been very creditably manufactured.

9. The Secretary of State, in acknowledging in his despatch No. 25, dated the 22nd March 1877, the receipt of the cocoons gathered in the Central Provinces, has forwarded a report by Mr. T. Wardle, from which it appears that although the cocoons, when made over to the filatures in France and Italy, were found to be very old and imperfect, the reelers spoke most hopefully of the results that might be attained with fresher cocoons properly gathered and prepared. Mr. Wardle, too, said that he was prepared to dye tasar silk as reeled in Europe by his improved processes in almost any color, even to very pale shades.

10. The first part of a further report from Mr. Wardle has meanwhile been received under cover of the Secretary of State's despatch No. 61, dated the 29th August 1878; as also some samples of tasar silk displayed at the Paris Exhibition, as prepared under Mr. Wardle's instructions. These specimens, which can be seen at the office of this Department by persons interested in the matter, are far superior to anything ever yet seen of the same kind, the organzine especially being remarkable for its excellence. The grége is softer, cleaner, and altogether better than the best raw tasar silk as yet reeled. It is clear from these samples that such difficulties as existed in the reeling of this silk have been completely overcome. Mr. Wardle's process produces silk so fine as to be capable of adaptation to any purpose for which mulberry silk is used. Excellent results have also been obtained in the spinning of tasar thread and the weaving of fabrics from spun silk. Mr. Wardle's experiments with the dyeing of the silk have also been quite successful. On the whole it is certain now that there is no inherent obstacle to the utilization of silk for manufacturing purposes.

11. The main question now to be answered is that of cost. Whether silk of this kind will be extensively consumed, depends upon the price at which it can be placed in the market. Mr. Wardle states that the cost of marking organzine and tram from the cocoons is 20 francs the kilogramme, viz., 10 francs for reeling and 10 francs for throwing. This is double the price at which ordinary tasars are now sold, and it is not easy to say whether purchasers will be found for the improved product, greatly superior as it is, though it seems that the price is susceptible of reduction. As yet the only indication of the prices likely to be given for tasar silk is an offer made by M. David, a silk manufacturer of St. Etienne, who expresses his readiness to take one or two thousand kilogrammes of cocoons delivered at Marseilles at the price of one franc the kilogramme. This price, it is clear, is much too low, for according to the information before the Government, cocoons could not profitably be laid down in Europe at less than three or four times the sum mentioned. This, however, is a matter which admits of local verification, and it should form the subject of enquiry.

12. The results obtained by Mr. Wardle, as well as by others working independently, are so important and so full of promise as regards the manufacture of this silk and the utilization of the manufacture for apparel and other purposes, that it is eminently desirable to thoroughly investigate the question of production. Information on this subject has been sought from various quarters, but the information in the possession of Government is not sufficient to enable it to furnish precise answers, yet it is necessary, if the attention of capitalists is to be attracted to the development of this industry, that full information should be forthcoming. M. Natalis Rondot, a delegate from the Chamber of Commerce of Lyons to the Paris Exhibition, and President of the Jury in the Silk Section, has written to the Government of India, asking for information on the following points, not only as regards the tasar worm but also as regards other undomesticated worms:—

(1) an enumeration of the different kinds of wild worms ;
(2) the districts from which each kind is obtained, and in what quantities ;
(3) the species of worm from which each kind of silk is manufactured ;
(4) the trees on which the worms feed ;
(5) the uses to which the silk is put by the natives ;
(6) the markets where they are to be purchased ;
(7) the probable prices of dry cocoons of each kind and of the silk as reeled by the natives ;
(8) the probable quantities retained for local consumption and available for exportation to European silk mills ;
(9) and the out-turn in money value of the silks woven in India, which M. Rondot thinks must be considerable, especially if tasar and other similar silks commonly worn by the natives are taken into account.

13. M. David, of St. Etienne, also asks for information on the following points:—

(1) the nature of the chemical agent used by natives to soften the cocoon ;
(2) whether the natives can reel a cocoon more than a year old ;
(3) the length of time elapsing from the spinning of the cocoon and the emergence of the moth.
(4) whether the dark and light colored cocoons which are found mixed in the bales sent from India are of different varieties, and whether they are found in the same localities ;
(5) also, whether it would be possible to obtain bales containing only light colored cocoons.

14. Some information, but of a vague and general kind, exists on a good many of the points enumerated by M. Rondot, and the Governor General in Council desires that an effort may be made to cause such specific information as is obtainable with special reference to the quantity obtainable and the prices on the spot, to be furnished with as little delay as possible. It is also much to be desired that particulars of manufacture should be furnished as far as possible.

The particulars of the out-turn of the filatures in Bengal are unknown; for, though the quantities exported and their values are ascertainable, Government is unable to say how much of the out-turn of the filatures (there are a great many native filatures) is kept in the country, or what it is worth. Of the small local native reeling (small separately, but large in the aggregate), no more is known than of the handloom village weaving of cotton. In Assam and Burma, silk reeling and weaving are a domestic occupation of the women of the house; in other provinces it is a trade. In Bombay, there are two mills worked by steam in which silk is woven, but the extent of their operations is unknown. In short, no precise statistical account of the silk industry in India is extant, though there is a good deal of information of a more or less vague and general character. As regards silk production, Mr. Geoghegan's account of silk in India contains practically all the information that Government possesses, although for some years past much attention has been paid to the production of tasar silk. The same is to be said of the other kinds of wild silk. These are all separately distinguished and shewn in Mr. Geoghegan's book, in the section given to the wild silk producers, as well as in the appendix by Captain Hutton. Interesting information, though in most cases of a general character, has been furnished by the Local Governments and Administrations, but more precise information is now desirable, and the Government of India will be glad if the Government of Bengal and the Chief Commissioners of the Central Provinces and Assam will take measures to collect it, and furnish a report giving a categorical reply to the enquiries of both M. Rondot and M. David.

ORDER.—Ordered, that, for the purposes indicated above, a copy of the Resolution, of the despatch from the Secretary of State, No. 61, dated the 29th August 1878, and extracts from M. Rondot's letters, be forwarded to the Government of Bengal and to the Chief Commissioners of the Central Provinces and Assam; and also that they be forwarded to the Government of Bombay for communication to Major Coussmaker.

Ordered, that a copy of this Resolution, and of the despatch from the Secretary of State, No. 61, dated the 29th August 1878, be forwarded for information to the Governments and Administrations mentioned on the margin.

Madras.	British Burma.
North-Western Provinces and Oudh.	Mysore and Coorg.
Punjab.	Hyderabad.

Ordered, that this Resolution and the papers read in the preamble thereof be published for general information.

(True Extract)

C. L. TUPPER,
For Secretary to the Government of India.

From the Secretary of State for India, To the Government of India, No. 61 (Revenue), dated 29th August 1878.

Referring to my predecessor's despatch No. 25 of the 22nd March 1877, I now transmit, for Your Excellency's information, copies of the first part of a further report by Mr. Thomas Wardle on tasar silk and Indian dye-stuffs, and of a memorandum thereon by Dr. Birdwood, C. S. I., together with the samples of silk referred to in the report; and also copies of a letter from Mr. Wardle, of the 31st July last, and of its enclosure, relative to an offer by M. David, of St. Etienne, to purchase 2,000 kilogrammes of tasar cocoons for the purpose of making manufacturing experiments at his own cost.

2. With regard to this latter subject, Mr. Wardle has been informed that he should be advised to procure the cocoons he requires in the ordinary course of trade from some firm in Bombay or Calcutta. I desire, however, that the informati[on] wishes for, relative to the native method of dealing with tasar cocoons, &c., may be procured and transmitted to me at an early date for communication to him.

3. It seems impossible to attach too much importance to the improvements introduced by Mr. Wardle in the manufacture of this silk, the results of which may confidently be expected to open up a large field of enterprise for the supply of this article to the European markets, and to bring into more extended use one of the raw products of India for which there has hitherto been but a limited demand.

4. I shall address Your Excellency further on this subject upon receipt of the second part of Mr. Wardle's report.

Memorandum by DR. GEORGE BIRDWOOD, C. S. I., dated 10*th August* 1878, on MR. T. WARDLE'S Report on Tasar Silk and Indian Dye-stuffs of 1*st August* 1878.

It would be difficult to speak too highly of the patience, ability, and perseverance with which Mr. Wardle has carried out these experiments, or of the importance of the results obtained. These are, in brief, that he has succeeded in preparing Indian wild silk almost as fine as the finest Chinese silk, and in dyeing it almost any color.

Whereas 1,000 yards of Indian wild silk formerly weighed from 10 to 15 drachms, it can be now prepared of the weight of only 3 drachms and under, the same quantity of the finest Chinese silk weighing 2 drachms to 4 drachms. In dyeing this wild silk Mr. Wardle's success has hitherto been chiefly with the aniline dye series. The defect of these colors is that they are crude, flaring, and inharmonious, but a process has been suggested to Mr. Wardle by which it may be possible to dye silks and other stuffs with the aniline series in rich, deep and artistic tones. I would suggest that Mr. Wardle's paper should be communicated at once to the Government of India. The portion of the report still due from him, on the application of the native dye-stuffs of India to Indian wild silk and other woven fabrics, will be principally of artistic interest. The present report is of very pressing practical interest, as M. David's letter shews. For nearly 100 years the Indian Government went on endeavouring to increase the export of Indian silk by importing eggs from China and mulberry trees and expert labor from France and Italy and elsewhere, but all in vain. Even after the abolition of the Company's trading monopoly the same false and costly course was pursued, until in 1858 the attention of the Government of Bombay was officially drawn to the wild silk of the country, undoubtedly originally derived from China, and thoroughly acclimatised. Beyond ascertaining that wild silk was produced all over the Bombay Presidency, nothing was then done by Government. But Dr. MacKenzie and Captain Coussmaker and others continued to give great attention to the subject, and the result of their enthusiastic labors, combined with Mr. Wardle's long interest in their researches, has been to lead to the experiments now reported, which afford a substantial ground of hope that a staple may have at last been added to the export trade of India. In fact if the results of Mr. Wardle's experiments are confirmed, he will have succeeded in making Indian wild silk merchantable wherever silk is woven and worn.

As to M. David's letter, it may be submitted to the Government of India; but probably the better plan, in his own interest, would be for him to write to some firm in Bombay or Calcutta to send him direct the 2,000 kilogrammes of cocoons he wants.

When the second part of Mr. Wardle's report on the native dye-stuffs of India is re-ed, it might be desirable to make a comprehensive report on the whole subject of those ents.

MR. WARDLE'S Report on Tasar Silk and Native Dye-stuffs of India.—(First Part).

Dated Leek, 1st August 1878.

I have completed the first part of my examination, and have now the honor of laying the results before the Government of India.

Last winter I received a communication from Dr. Birdwood asking me to undertake the arrangement of exhibits of Indian silks and dye-stuffs in the India Section at the Paris Exhibition.

I have done so, and the results of those exhibits form the basis of this report, especially that part which relates to the tasar and other wild silks of India.

I have not had sufficient time to examine all the dye-stuffs of India which were sent to me. In a few months the examination will be completed and will form the substance of my second report.

In dealing with the tasar cocoons sent to me, I have endeavoured, with signal success, to improve the manufacture of this silk.

This has been accomplished to an extent that will greatly increase its importance in the silk industry of Europe, as well as making it much less unyielding in its resistance to tinctorial matters.

Much of the import of tasar silk is of such low and badly reeled quality as to be totally unfit for nearly all European textile work; and even where the quality happens to be better than it usually is, it is much too coarse in thread for any but the coarsest kind of work; consequently its use is and has always been extremely circumscribed.

I shall be able to shew that there is no longer any necessity for this, nor for any obstacles to be interposed for the extended use and cultivation of this silk, and that it promises to be as useful in degree as that of the mulberry worm.

I believe also that the same may be said for several other species of Indian wild silks.

Several of the samples to illustrate this accompany my report; the rest, including the dyed specimens, are under exhibition at Paris, but shall be described here.

I have given the samples now sent the same numbers as those in the Paris Exhibition case. The report will, therefore, correspond in numbering and explanation with the monograph I have written, and which is appended to the second edition of Dr. Birdwood's Handbook of the Indian Section.

Nos. 8 and 9 are samples of tasar, organzine, and tram, illustrative of the quality and state of manufacture such as is now used in England for weaving, and a good representation of the present state of its manufacture, which gives a size of 255 deniers (15 drachms per 1,000 yards). The sizes of tasar generally used in England run from 152 deniers (9 drachms) to 255 deniers (15 drachms). These are very coarse sizes, and must necessarily be unfit to produce such fine textile work as the mulberry silk, which can be and is manufactured into organzine and tram of 21 deniers and upwards (1¼ drachms), and from which are made the finest silk fabrics.

Nos. 13 to 17 are samples reeled for the market by the natives from the cocoons in various parts of India. They shew the more or less rude and imperfect states in which is prepared for the market and for native use.

I send them only to point out the contrast between them and the next sample, 17*a*, which shews what, under proper management, this fibre is capable of. This is raw tasar silk reeled from the cocoons I received from India.

In September 1876 I proceeded, with your permission, to Italy with some of the cocoons, to have my ideas of cocoon-reeling and throwing carried out (cocoon-reeling being a branch of silk industry not practised in England), and I am glad to report that I there met with the success I anticipated. The house which I employed to make the experiments, Messrs. Gaddum and Company, were so much impressed with the importance of the results as to say to me they would send out to India a person for the purpose of collecting tasar cocoons on their own account.

I have subsequently heard of their interesting themselves in this manufacture.

This sample, 17*a*, is raw silk as wound from the cocoon, the fibres of six cocoons being wound together, forming one thread ready to be thrown into organzine or tram in the usual way, and capable of yielding sizes of from 51 deniers upwards, i. e., 3 drachms and upwards, per 1,000 yards.

In addition to this greater fineness of thread, as compared with that of the present tasar silk of commerce, you will notice an almost entire absence of lumps, technically called "foul slubs," which have hitherto prevented tasar silk being substituted for the mulberry silks.

So that instead of organzine and tram of 15 drachms to 9 drachms per 1,000 yards, you have before you the improved silk capable of yielding organzine and tram of 51 deniers, or 3 drachms per 1,000 yards skein, and this with a silk primarily so much thicker in fibre than the mulberry silks.

At the end of the report, I have added a table of microscopic measurements which I have made of the thickness of the primary fibres of the mulberry silks (China, India, Italy, France, Japan, and those of the tasar and other wild silks of India). From this it will be seen that tasar silk is from three to four times thicker in fibre than the mulberry silks.

Tasar silk possesses the greatest strength and tensile power, and it has as much lustre as any silk.

No. 19 is a sample of tasar organzine (51 deniers or three drachms per 1,000 yards) manufactured in Italy from the cocoons under my own instructions and superintendence. The improvement in quality, fineness, and cleanness will be seen to be most marked, and that, instead of the coarse sizes of tasar now used, of 152 to 255 deniers (9 to 15 drachms), there may be obtained by proper management organzine and tram of excellent quality from the same cocoons of 51 deniers (3 drachms) and upwards, which can be woven into a great variety of stuffs, for which until now only the mulberry silks have been available.

The attention of all interested in or connected with silk manufacture cannot be too strongly drawn to this fact, nor can its value be overrated.

There is a most important future in store for the tasar silk industry, and as great improvements will take place as those which resulted from the introduction of proper machinery and skill many years ago in the mulberry silk district of Bengal, when it was found that Bengal silks, in place of being then almost unworkable, could be manufactured in such a way as to bring them into extended use in Europe, so as even to rival French and Italian silks. The cost of making organzine and tram from the cocoons with the improved mode is 20 francs per kilogramme—10 francs for reeling and 10 francs for throwing.

You will observe from the samples, and from what I have just stated, that the success in improving this manufacture is complete, and that tasar silk, when properly made, is ready to take its place in all the silk textile industries where extreme fineness is not required, such, for instance, as cloths of which a material is all tasar, or mixed cloth, with tasar weft, for trimmings, braids, elastic boot webs, where silk of 3 to 6 drachms is in constant use, also for the weft or shute of ribbons, the chief obstacle to its use hitherto for this last purpose having been its foulness (slubbiness). Now this imperfection is removed, there will be an extensive demand for it in the ribbon trade.

The difference between the ordinary tasar, selling with difficulty at 3s. to 4s. per lb., and the samples I submit is due to improved methods of manufacture, which I am ready to communicate to you, and even to teach to the native workmen if that course is thought more useful.

In the meantime, however, I would strongly urge that the greatest encouragement be given to the proper gathering and collecting of tasar cocoons and the exportation of them in a compressed state, and that encouragement be given to the planting and cultivation of the most suitable trees and plants which feed the tasar worm in the likely labor centres near good roads where the cost of carriage can be minimized.

The worm feeds on the following trees and plants :—

Rhizophora calceolaris Linn.
Terminalia alata glabra. (Assun tree.)
Terminalia tomentosa. (The Saj tree.)
Terminalia Catappa. (Country Almond tree.)
Tectona grandis. (Teak tree.)
Zizyphus jujuba. (Ber tree.)
Shorea robusta. (Sal tree.)
Bombax heptapliyllum. (Semul.)
Careya sphærica.
Pentaptera tomentosa.
Pentaptera glabra.
Recinus communis. (Castor Oil plant.)
Cassia lanceolata.

I am quite sure that a very largely increased production of cocoons will meet with a ready sale, especially in France and England. Even the unwindable and pierced cocoons and waste will have a ready market, since our spinners, as I shall shew further on, can utilize all such refuse, and make excellent yarns and cloths from them.

I may mention that I took the opportunity, whilst on the jury of the Paris Exihibition to draw the attention of M. Colcombet, a juror, and M. David, two of the largest manufacturers of ribbons in St. Etienne, to the improved tasar. After thoroughly inspecting it, they said that if the Government of India could enable them to obtain cocoons, or point out how they may be obtained at about one franc per kilogramme, they would buy all that India produced, so certain were they of finding a ready sale and extended use for this, in place of the more costly silks.

M. David has since written to me asking me to obtain 2,000 kilogrammes (4,400 lbs) of tasar cocoons for experiment. He says many uses may be found for well reeled tasar, the only important question is that of an economical means of doing so.

These economical means are at hand ; for in place of the ordinary mode of reeling and throwing silk from the tasar cocoons into organzine and tram, which costs about 35 fr per kilogramme, or 12s. 8d. per lb., it can be done by the improved mode at about 20 francs per kilogramme, or 7s. 3d. per lb., and this cost will be decreased when the cocoons are properly collected and the industry better regulated.

Not less important than manufacturing is the dyeing of tasar silk, in the investigation of which I have been so long engaged.

I am happy to be able to report that the dyeing of this silk can now be successfully accomplished in all shades of color.

The results I have exhibited at Paris in three grades. The first consists of organzine and tram of the same coarse quality as at present used in England for weaving into self-colored dress pieces, dyed in a variety of reds, blues, greens, yellows, and tertiary colors, with the dye-stuffs native to India, and with which I was furnished by the Government of India for examination.

An exposure of upwards of two months to the sunshine of Paris has only very slightly affected them, although placed in a position exposed to the direct rays of the morning and mid-day sun. The colors are not of the vivid intensity and crudeness of those produced by the aniline dyes, but they possess more tone and are fitter for all purposes of true decorative art, and possess much more permanency: but on those points I hope to treat more definitely when I have the honor of presenting my report on the dye-stuffs of India, and their applicability to tasar silk, at present under examination.

By the advice of Dr. Birdwood, I also exhibit tasar silk dyed with ordinary aniline dyes, in order to shew what could be done on it with these dyes, which in Europe have almost replaced the better and faster materials. I have therefore dyed two grades of tasar organzine in a variety of delicate shades of aniline dyes—one, the second, is the improved organzine, the third is ordinary tasar organzine of good quality.

In dyeing the improved organzine, a very important fact appears. The silk takes the dyes with less difficulty. I have no doubt that one of the main reasons why the natives cannot dye tasar silk will be in the fact that the methods of their rude manufacture partly destroy whatever affinity such silk has for tinctorial impregnation.

It is not unlikely that before tasar silk can be really well dyed in India, a considerable improvement must be effected in all the manufacturing operations, even from the time the cocoon becomes completed.

It would, perhaps, be hardly within the scope of this Report to go into the chemical reasons for this opinion, but they are no less important than real.

I have also to report similar success in applying printed colors upon tasar silk cloths, samples of which I send with the Report Nos. 21 and 25. It is, as far as I am aware, the first time any attempt has been made, either in Europe or in the East, to print, on wild silk cloth of any kind.

So that now printed tasar silk can be successfully used for wall damasks, curtains, furniture coverings, hangings, women's and girls' dresses, with great effect, and I would draw the attention of upholsterers and broad silk manufacturers to these specimens, and especially three under No. 55 of twill silk, made of this material from the warp and weft of Nos. 8 and 9, 255 deniers.

The fabrics made of tasar silk are very strong, most durable, and possess much lustre. Patterns printed in blue are the first successful application of indigo on silk as a print, as a pencil blue as formerly.

The tone of blue is very rich, modified to some extent by the natural ground color of the silk (which is fortunately incapable of being made vividly white), and has consequently controlled too great a brightness.

They will prove remarkably fast; in fact none of the colors are printed in aniline or any other fugitive dyes.

These fabrics are woven with organzine and tram of the coarse native-reeled and English-thrown tasar of 15 drachms per 1,000 yards, and are not really such good examples of what can be done in printing on fabrics of improved manufacture, samples of which I hope before long to submit to you, but they effectively serve the purpose of shewing that now a great variety of colors can be applied to tasar silk fabrics in printing as well as in dyeing, and I cannot conceive of any more beautiful application of them than to the walls of rooms after the manner of damask, if well designed.

I come now to treat of spinning tasar silk. This is effected after the manner of spinning cotton, wool, flax or any other short fibre that cannot be wound off in a continuous thread.

Since the important improvements which have been made in England of late years in silk spinning machinery, a new and large industry has sprung up whereby all refuse silk and unwindable cocoons of the mulberry silk manufacture are submitted to the operations of carding, combing, and spinning, and threads of beautiful regularity and silkiness are made.

I have exhibited a series to shew to what uses the waste of tasar silk and the cocoons pierced by the exit of the moth can be put after being spun in this way.

There are probably not less than forty firms in England engaged in this operation, and many more in Switzerland, France, and Italy, but it is only recently that tasar waste silk has attracted notice, and large quantities have been a drug in the market for a long time. They have been bought up, and have been spun and woven into fabrics for upholstery and dresses of surprising perfection and interest, and a demand which cannot be fully supplied has arisen for a further supply.

I send sample No. 56*a* which I have had spun and woven from unwindable cocoons out of those I received from India; also five samples, No. 57, made of tasar waste and printed in colors.

Also samples of yarns spun from tasar waste for weaving, sewing and knitting stockings.

Probably of not less importance in the future are the other wild silks of India, particularly that of the Arrindi or Eria worm of Assam, known under the following names:—

Phalæna Cynthia, (Roxburgh).
Bombyx Cynthia, (Oliver).
Samia Cynthia, (Hübner.).
Saturnia Cynthia, (Westwood).
Saturnia Arrundi, (Royle).
The Arrindi or Arrundi silk-worm moth (Roxburgh).

With this I must connect the Attacus ricini (Boisduval), the same insect, as far as I can gather, except that it is fed on the Ricinus communis, or Palma Christi plant, and is reared in a domesticated state in Assam, and over a great part of Hindustan, more especially in the districts of Dinagepur and Rangpur.

Mr. Hugon gives the following interesting particulars about it :—"The larva, when at full size, is about 3½ inches long. It spins its cocoon in four days. The hill tribes settled in the plains are fond of eating the chrysalis."

The cocoon is much smaller than that of the tasar, and is soft. The natives cannot wind the silk, but spin it like cotton. Dr. Helfer says that the insect is so productive as to give sometimes twelve broods a year, and that the worm grows rapidly, and offers no difficulty whatever for an extensive speculation.

Mr. Atkinson says the filament is so delicate as to render it impracticable to wind off the silk; it is therefore spun like cotton. The yarn thus manufactured is woven into a coarse kind of white cloth, of a seemingly loose texture, but of incredible durability, the life of one person being seldom sufficient to wear out a garment made of it.

The winding of the Eria cocoon is said to have been recently accomplished. The thickness of the Eria filament is 1—3800 of an inch.

Leaving the question as to whether it be successfully wound or not, one important consideration respecting its use presents itself, namely, its capability of being spun like cotton or wool. The great improvements made in late years in England in spinning machinery have proved that marvellous results in making an even thread from waste silk and unwindable cocoons for sewing and weaving purposes may be attained, and I will venture to predict a future for this and the produce of all unwindable silk-worm cocoons that will compensate for collection.

The industry of the natives should be stimulated to the gathering in of all kinds of wild silk cocoons, whether windable or not, for there is no doubt that those kinds which cannot be wound can be most easily spun, and there is at the present moment a request on the part of silk spinners for a larger supply of tasar silk cocoons and tasar silk waste for spinning purposes, and no doubt other silk cocoons would be gladly bought up.

A worm so prolific and yielding such exceedingly fine silk gives a large promise of future supply to the spinner. I should be glad to have your authority for a further and thorough effort to make silk marketable in Europe.

Besides the Eria worm there are also the following which furnish good silk cocoons, all of which I have exhibited in Paris :—

The Attacus Atlas.

The Mooga or Moonga silk (Antheræa Assama) giving five broods a year. I send a sample of this silk, No. 35. It promises to be useful silk under proper care.

The Bombyx Attacus, "Yama mai," a native of Japan, but found in India. In Japan the silk of this worm is said to be most highly prized, and reserved for the use of royalty, but this I am inclined to doubt, as the silk is of a coarseish character. This I was assured by the Japanese at the Paris Exhibition is not now the case; they shewed me several highly interesting fabrics made with it. The cocoon is of a beautiful pale green color and is easily wound. It has been reared in Europe, and a cross between it and Bombyx Attacus pernyi is a success in France, being so hardy that the eggs will hatch at freezing point. A successfully encouraged cultivation of it in India would make a valuable addition to our Eastern sericulture.

The thickness of the fibre is 1—950 part of an inch, being a little finer than tasar silk. also very much whiter in color, which is an advantage for dyeing.

addition to these are the following :—A silk called "Ya baine," from Prome, in t silk from Assam (Bombyx textor); Mezankuri silk, rare; Actias Selene.

236 366

In Simla, Balfour states there are eight or nine species of Bombyx, probably all silk-producers.

I plead for the utilization and extended cultivation of all these wild silks, particularly the Tasar, Mooga, Eria, and Yama mai.

The difficulties of manufacturing, dyeing, and printing are, I am thankful to report, overcome.

It only remains for the Government of India, if I may presume to urge it, to give that encouragement and constant support to the increased production of the wild silk industry of India, and not to the wild silk only, but also to the mulberry silk, that has for centuries been accorded by Sovereigns and Statesmen in France to the permanent establishment and encouragement of the silk trade in that country, to make India a chief exporter of raw material, as France now is of the manufactured products.

From MR. WARDLE, To the Under-Secretary of State for India, dated Leek, 31st July 1878.

Since writing my report I have received from M. David, who I am told is the largest silk manufacturer at St. Etienne, an order for 2,000 kilogrammes of tasar cocoons, for the purpose of making manufacturing experiments with this silk at his own cost.

I enclose a translated copy of part of his letter.

Will you have the kindness to inform me if the Government of India will authorize the collection of the cocoons, and supply them to M. David with the information he desires? I have no opportunity of obtaining them for him.

Copy of a letter from M. DAVID, of St. Etienne, to MR. WARDLE.

I offer to buy one to two thousand kilogrammes tasar cocoons delivered at Marseilles at one franc per kilogramme; these cocoons to be of the year's crop and well killed, not pierced. Kindly impress on your Bombay friends to kill the worms in the cocoons well. In case the moths come out on the road, the cocoons will be useless. A friend of mine has just received a bale of these cocoons and the moths came out of them at Marseilles.

In order to facilitate the reeling in France, kindly give me the following information :—

1st.—What is the chemical agent made use of by the natives to soften the cocoon and make it ready for reeling?

2nd.—Can the natives reel a cocoon more than a year old?

3rd.—What is the length of time elapsing from the making of the cocoon and the time of the coming out of the moth: does not that time vary greatly?

4th.—The cocoons in the bales are mixed in color, dark and light: are these different varieties, and are they found on the same spots? Would it be possible to get only light colored ones?

I shall be thankful for answers to the above questions, which will facilitate my task.

Many uses may be found for well reeled tasar. The only important question at present is that of an economical means of so doing.

SUPPLEMENT TO THE

MYSORE GAZETTE

Published by Authority.

No. 2 of 1879.

BANGALORE, SATURDAY, JANUARY 11, 1879.

MINUTE BY HIS EXCELLENCY THE VICEROY ON THE MYSORE FAMINE.

Mr. C. A. ELLIOTT's Report upon the Mysore Famine will be laid before my honourable colleagues in the Government of India; it will be forwarded to Her Majesty s Government; and it will be published as soon as possible. When I directed the preparation of this report, there was ground for fearing that parts of Northern India might be afflicted by severe famine in 1878-79; and I was desirous that a history of the difficulties, failures, and successes in the Mysore Famine should be in hands of authorities who might have to deal with a similar calamity in Upper India. The rainy season of 1878 has, however, ended much more favourably than it began. I hope that in no part of India will famine have to be combated in the year 1879. But I believe the present history of the Mysore Famine will be of the greatest use to Indian authorities who may hereafter have to contend against a similar calamity.

2. The country of Mysore contained, at the census of 1871, a population of 5,055,000, nine tenths of whom live by the land. In ordinary years it produces about 25 per cent more food than its population can consume; its land is held by a body of well-to-do peasant proprietors, who in average years have a comfortable surplus income; 15 per cent of its cultivated land is irrigated, mainly from tanks; it is connected with the coast by a railway, and it is traversed by a net-work of fairly good roads; it had prospered for many years, although either the early or the latter rainfall was occasionally scanty over a part of the province. Mysore had not been visited by famine for fifty years. It seemed, therefore, as if the province and the people were in as good condition for withstanding a famine as any Indian province or population can ever be. In one respect, however, Mysore was at a disadvantage; it possessed only 60 miles of railway, passing through a corner of one district and into the heart of another; six districts out of the eight, into which the province is divided, had thus no railway communications at all. The beginning of the recent calamity was the partial failure of the rains in 1875; the rainfall was from one-third to two-thirds of the average; much of the food crop was lost; but the stocks of food in Mysore have always been large; and this failure caused only temporary or occasional distress, for the price of food did not rise to double the ordinary rates. In the year 1876 the rainfall again was very short; barely a third of the ordinary harvest was reaped; matters were aggravated by the fact that crops had failed in the adjacent districts of Madras and Bombay; and the middle of December 1876 famine had begun. In the months of April and May the usual spring showers came, and hope revived. But the early rains of 1877 failed, famine increased in the land; and it was not until the bountiful latter rains and October 1877 that the pressure of famine began to abate. During the eight months of extreme famine, no crops were reaped; the price of food ranged from three to six times the ordinary rates; and for the common people there were no means of earning wages outside the relief-works. Even in 1877-78, though some relief was felt, the yield of the harvest was less than half the food-crop of an ordinary year. From November 1877 till the present time of writing, the price of food has ranged at nearly three times the rate of ordinary years. Thus during the past three years, the people of Mysore have suffered from failure of harvest and famine prices, and at one time a water-famine was apprehended: but from that additional calamity the province has been spared.

3. Mr. Elliott's report shews how famine affected the country and the people of Mysore, and how the British Government of Mysore attempted to mitigate its evils. Early in the autumn of 1876, when the first year of drought was nearly over, symptoms of the coming disaster were reported to the Local Government. The poorer classes of the population began to lose heart, and multitudes moved off towards the coffee districts in the western hills, where the people of Mysore had been wont to find employment and wages for many years past. In times of famine, it has been the custom of the Indian Government to give employment and wages on public works to the destitute poor, to afford gratuitous relief to those who are unable to labour, and to make small loans to petty landholders, so as to enable them to tide over the hardest time. In one exceptional famine the Government had imported food from a distance to feed the people of the stricken province. In September 1876 relief-works were opened in parts of Mysore. In October pressure on the people increased; more relief-works were opened. The Government, after reviewing the situation and prospects, decided that private enterprise must be left to import food for the replenishment of the exhausted food-stocks, but that the State would open relief-works, would assist in giving gratuitous aid to the helpless, and would postpone its demand for land-rents. These orders unfortunately, as was proved by subsequent events, favoured recourse to small works scattered over the country, and served to support the Chief Commissioner's action in a direction that ultimately led to results not contemplated at the time when they were issued.

4. By the month of December severe famine had declared itself over an area containing about 3½ millions out of the 5 millions which constitute the population of Mysore. The Government adhered to the programme of October, which was good so far as it went. But there was a distinct failure to realize, or even to estimate, what would be the full effect of the famine on the country; and how much would have to be done and spent before favourable harvests in 1877 could give appreciable relief to the people. The objective of the Government efforts being thus undefined and indistinct, no system was devised, and no sufficient organization was created, for conducting relief operations on the necessary scale. Judging after the event, and by the light of the present report, we can see that, even if imported food and old stocks sufficed to feed the people, there must have been from 500,000 to 800,000 people of the labouring classes who could not procure food at famine prices, unless the Government paid them wages on relief-works, or otherwise provided them with the means of living, until employment in the fields was again available. The Mysore Government and its officers were, at the beginning of the crisis, much swayed by a desire to restrict expenditure as far as possible,—a sentiment which in a poor country like India is always praiseworthy, and which, in the present case, derived additional weight from the desire to transfer the Province of Mysore to its Native Prince with uncrippled resources.

5. The absence of any careful forecast of the troubles that were coming upon [M]ysore caused the Government to attempt to meet the difficulty with the same staff and [th]e organization that sufficed for ordinary times. In India, operations for the relief [o]n rural tracts have to be begun and carried on, down to the minutest detail, by [G]ent and its agents. The labour involved in such an undertaking is enormous, [a]ny staff of the Mysore Province was, without special aid and special supervision, quite unable to meet the requirements of the occasion. One most serious consequence was that the Government and its superior officers remained to some extent in ignorance of the condition of the country and the people, and misunderstood some of the phenomena that were reported. For instance, when it was reported that people would not come to the relief-works in a particular district, the Government did not learn until it was too late that mismanagement of the relief-works had caused the famine-stricken people either to wander off and die, or to go home and starve. An inadequate organization and an inefficient system were unfortunately prolonged by that insufficiency of information which was their natural result. The situation required that the whole power of the Government in all departments throughout the province, aided by a largely increased organization, should be directed to the relief of famine, on a system pre-arranged down to details, but with sufficient scope for personal discretion. Had this been done in December 1876, as it afterwards was done in September 1877, the facts of the Mysore Famine would have been earlier ascertained, and the necessary measures of relief could have been taken from the first. More money would indeed have been spent; but disorganization and waste would have been avoided; while many thousands of lives would have been saved.

6. Chapter III of Mr. Elliott's report tells the history of the famine from the autumn of 1876 to April 1877. From December till March matters grew worse; 500 tons of food (enough to support 900,000 people) were imported daily by railway: yet the price of food ranged, during those months, at from 13 to 15 lbs a rupee; that is to say, at four to five times the ordinary rates. When Sir Richard Temple visited Mysore, on behalf of the Supreme Government, and conferred with the Bangalore authorities, the real condition and prospects of the people had not been gauged by the Local Government. Statistics of the relief operations, which were then of old date and which now appear to have been incorrect, were placed before him; Sir Richard Temple advised in accordance with the information furnished him; and the chief change of system and organization which he then advocated was the immediate institution of a village-to-village, house-to-house relief, throughout the famine districts, in order to ascertain the real condition of the people, and prevent them dying at their houses. Orders were issued by the Local Government for acting on this suggestion; but, partly in consequence of absence of detailed instructions, and mainly because no sufficient staff for accomplishing the task was sanctioned, the village enquiry was extremely imperfect and village relief was not actually attempted.

7. During the months of December to March the numbers of people relieved were—

	On relief and other works.	By gratuitous relief.	Total.
January	31,042	6,498	37,530
February	63,348	22,462	85,810
March	69,564	23,295	92,859

But the relief given was not sufficient: the people took to wandering aimlessly from their homes where they had no food; the death-rate increased terribly; and deaths from starvation occurred. No change in the system had been made up to the month of April, when the usual spring showers fell; and it was hoped that the end of the famine had come. This hope, for which indeed there was up till the month of June some good ground, may have deterred the Local Government from reforming and strengthening the relief organization. During the months of April and May, the relief given on public works was materially contracted; while at the same time gratuitous relief was given in the shape of cooked food, at scores of central places in different parts of the province, to rapidly increasing numbers of people. As the month of June 1877 wore on, and as July was apparent that the early rains were going to fail again, and for the third cession. Panic and mortality among the people increased. The numbers employment on the relief-works continued to decrease; but multitudes thronged the relief-kitchens where food was given to the poor. By the middle of August 1877, the famine was at its worst; the numbers relieved by the Government had been—

	On relief and other works.	By gratuitous relief at the food-kitchens.	Total.

July ..	.. 47,609	137,560	185,169
August ..	.. 49,200	194,083	243,283

Among the poor creatures who were wandering over the country in quest of food, the mortality was very great. During those five months there died at the relief-kitchens tens of thousands to whom help came too late; and in the streets of Bangalore, the chief city of the province, the bodies of those who had died during the night, were picked up morning after morning by the score. Money was by that time being spent on relief at the rate of nearly £100,000 a month; but the organization had not been strengthened; the expenditure had not been systematized; and the Government officers of Mysore, many of whom worked zealously to relieve the distress, and to make the Government aid go as far as possible, were unable to cope with the gigantic dimensions of the calamity. The concluding pages of Chapter IV of the report shew how and why the relief-works, which in Indian famines are and ought to be the backbone of the relief system, failed to furnish any appreciable aid to the distressed population. I am afraid that the ill-success of the Mysore relief-works must be attributed mainly to mismanagement; and I feel that the Government of India must accept its share in the responsibility for that mismanagement in a province that was under its own control, inasmuch as it did not appreciate in their proper force the facts that underlay the reported results, and did not at an earlier date insist on the application of a sufficient remedy.

8. Before passing from the consideration of the period when the famine was at its height, I would observe that, even at the worst time, private trade poured into Mysore as much grain as the railway could carry, and would have sent much more if additional means of carriage had been available. At the same time supplies of food were carried by traders up the steep ascents of the Western Ghat mountains from the Malabar coast districts into Mysore. Food was dear, to a point beyond the memory of living men; but still food was to be had by those who could pay for it. And whatever may have been the shortcomings of the relief organization, the present history of the Mysore Famine does not shake the opinion of the Government of India,—acted upon throughout 1877,—that it is best to leave private traders to import food into a famine-stricken country while it has means of communication with distant markets.

9. Chapter V of Mr. Elliott's report gives an account of the arrangements made to carry out an improved relief system on the lines laid down by the Government of India during the visit of myself and my colleague Sir Alexander Arbuthnot to Southern India in August and September 1877. In measuring the success of those operations, it must be remembered that, at the time of their commencement, there was a most favourable change in the weather; and that, after September 1877, the gloom of that great calamity which up till September 1878 continued to over-shadow Mysore, was never without some gleams of hope; gleams which, with one dark interval in February 1878, gradually brightened as the season advanced.

The first step taken in September 1877 was to reinforce the Mysore staff with trained officers and volunteers, officers from Her Majesty's army, whose duty was to direct operations; with Engineers to manage relief-works and organize famine labour; with officers to arrange famine hospitals and tend the sick. The next step was to gather the threads of famine administration into one hand, and to lay down detailed rules for the guidance of famine officers of all grades. And the last step, which followed close upon the others, was to effect a thorough and intelligent inspection of all the famine operations throughout the country. It is now only too clear that all this ought to have been done in December 1876. The report tells of the many difficulties which were met in the management of the relief-works; in getting the people to come to these works; in employing persons in different stages of weakness, so as not to overtask them, whilst giving them some incentive to live and work; in clearing the relief-kitchens and carrying the inmates, with their consent, to the works if they were fit for labour, or to their homes if they were past work; in establishing and working a system whereby house-ridden folk were relieved at their homes; in preventing peculation; in securing for the province a moderate outturn of useful work in exchange for relief given to the able-bodied; and lastly, in helping the ryots, to recover their position and independence, by a judicious distribution of the alms sent from Great Britain, Ireland, and the British Colonies, for the aid of the famine-stricken people of Southern India. I cannot forbear acknowledging here the munificient liberality shewn by the people of England and her colonies in sending so great a sum of money, within a few months, to aid their Indian fellow-subjects. I believe that any of the generous contributors to the famine fund, who may read paragraphs 107 to 111 of this chapter of the Mysore report, will feel that their charity was judiciously administered, and that it did vast good to an important class of their fellow-subjects.

10. Mr. Elliott shews that the famine has cost the province of Mysore from 800,000 to 1,000,000 lives; that it must cost the Mysore treasury at least 1 million sterling, and may cost nearly 1¼ millions or a full year's revenue; whilst the loss of produce, live-stock, and other property during these three disastrous years cannot have been much less than 9¼ millions sterling. I accept, subject to such further light as the Famine Commission may throw on this difficult question, the conclusion that a somewhat larger expenditure on relief, judiciously administered, might have saved a large number of the lives that have been lost, and that such further expenditure should have been incurred in the material interests of the province, irrespective of other considerations. But I cannot but feel that in great famines there must be a limit to the expenditure which is practically possible for the relief of distress. The interests of the country, of the survivors, and of future generations, require that this fact should be recognized. And I fear that, when great famines come, it will not be practically possible to prevent a serious increase to the normal mortality, or so to alleviate all distress as to prevent very extreme suffering to the people. It would be premature for me to draw conclusions for guidance in future famines from Mr. Elliott's report. The Famine Commission will, no doubt, weigh fully the facts recorded therein, and I commend the report to their careful consideration.

I am deeply indebted to Mr. Elliott for his excellent report, which tells truthfully and graphically the story of much human suffering, borne with patient endurance characteristic of the people of India, and gives a faithful account of the early failure and subsequent success in relieving a great population from the dreadful effects of prolonged famine. I recognize that Mr. Elliott, when reporting on the Mysore Famine, as he was instructed to do so with fearless frankness, has been obliged to reflect upon the conduct of some of the officers who afterwards proved his valued coadjutors. But in so doing, he has, I conceive, discharged the unpleasant duty which lay upon him with much impartiality, and with all possible consideration to the persons concerned, avoiding as far as possible all matter that had not a direct and important bearing on the very painful series of events with the close of which he was deputed to deal, and of which he has become the narrator.

11. The thanks of the Government of India are due to Mr. Elliott for the ab and energy with which he carried out their famine policy in Mysore. Though vince and its people were new to him, he promptly mastered the position; and directed relief operations with a patience and good sense that overcar and with the fullest tenderness for the people in dire calamity. To Mr

the Chief Engineer, and to Mr. Wingate, the Famine Secretary, I tender the hearty acknowledgments of the Government for the skill, knowledge, and zeal they brought to bear on the difficult questions connected with the conduct of relief-works and the organization of gratuitous relief. But these three officers could have done little if they had not received full support and co-operation from Mr. Saunders, the Chief Commissioner, from the Members of the Mysore Commission, and from the many officers who were lent by other Local Governments, and by His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, for relief-work in Mysore. If there was failure during the early months of the famine, all ranks of the service throughout the province took their share in the relief operations of the later months, when those operations were adequately directed on a proper system. The thanks of the Government are especially due to

The thanks of the Government of India have already been conveyed to Mr. J. D. Gordon, C. S. I., and the Members of the Bangalore Central Relief Committee; and also to the military officers who volunteered for, and did excellent service in, the campaign against the Mysore Famine.

Abstract of Season or Intermediate Reports for the Week ending 29th March 1879.

Bangalore District.—Crops in good condition. Prospects of season good. Prices have fallen. Fever and ague still prevalent in some places.

Kolar District.—Crops in same condition as in last week. Season hopeful. Health good.

Túmkúr District.—Crops in good condition. Prices falling. Fever still prevalent.

Mysore District.—Cotton and sugar-cane crops thriving. Public health generally good. Prices stationary.

Hassan District.—The state of crops and prospects good. Public health is also reported to be good, except in Arkalgúd and Harnhalli Taluks where fever and dysentery were prevalent. Prices stationary.

Shimoga District.—Vaisak paddy crop in good condition. All dry crops have been harvested. Public health good. Prices stationary.

Kadur District.—Prices rising. Markets fairly supplied. Cattle in good condition.

Chital-droog District.—Crops in good condition. Some have been harvested. The early grown paddy crop in the head-quarters hobli of the Budihal Taluk sown on about 53 acres of land has been entirely destroyed from disease which caused the grain to fall off before getting ripe. Small insects which probably caused the damage were found in some parts of the field.

Coorg.—Agricultural prospects good. Fever prevalent.
